

WHOSE NHS?

Citizens and public service reform

Do you support the growing involvement of the private sector in the NHS? Does choice create efficiency? Will the new NHS listen more to patients? Will the public see any difference in how they are treated?

This lively discussion event will provide an opportunity for you to participate directly in this debate, hear the arguments for and against NHS reforms and ask questions to a panel of distinguished experts.

- Professor Mark Exworthy, Royal Holloway, University of London
- Candace Imison, Deputy Director of Policy at The Kings Fund
- Professor Julian Le Grand, London School of Economics
- Andrew Liles, Chief Executive of Ashford and St Peters NHS Foundation Trust
- Roy Lilley, independent health policy analyst

www.rhul.ac.uk/whosenhs  @RHULCentreSoSci #whosenhs

Thursday, 8 November 6.15pm

Windsor Auditorium, Royal Holloway, University of London, Egham TW20 0EX

FREE No need to book

To submit a question to the panel in advance email oliver.heath@rhul.ac.uk or tweet us
Event organised by Royal Holloway's Centre for Social Sciences as part of the ESRC Festival of Social Science.

Royal Holloway
University of London