

Developing health and life sciences in Kent Surrey and Sussex

10am – 4pm / 9 July / Gatwick Hilton

Dear colleague

We invited you to hold the date for 9 July where we hope you will join us to develop health and life sciences in Kent Surrey and Sussex.

We promised you more information and at the first event in this series of partnership days, we will unpick the challenges of future innovation with representatives from industry, higher educational institutes, the NHS and social care.

We have the potential to create the best health system in the world, enhancing the quality of life for people with long term conditions, preventing people from dying prematurely, helping people recover from ill health and ensuring that patients have a positive experience of care.

That is our collective challenge.

Our collective need is for faster change bolstered by rapid diffusion and accelerated uptake of best practice. We have a ground-breaking opportunity to spread existing best practice faster, and identify and adopt new innovations to improve local people's health and care.

At this event we want to harness skills and connect better with industry, university researchers and clinicians so we develop improved technology, research, products and services, in line with the changing needs of our population and which can be adopted more quickly.

Do we need a fresh approach to adopting new products and services?

The purpose of this launch event is to:

- To promote the concept and credibility by bringing together a mix of delegates from industry, higher education institutes, NHS and social care
- To inspire delegates so you want to work more closely with the AHSN
- To communicate what we are doing and where we are heading
- To engage with you to create and highlight opportunities for the future work programme – the future of innovation debate
- To understand better what we need to put in place to initiate and further develop collaborative working between health, social care, industry and academia and make this a whole system, fully engaged KSS AHSN.

The agenda will be available soon.

If you haven't yet registered for your reserved place, please apply now at kssahsn.eventbrite.com
