1. What attracted you to become an academic in your research field?

I studied business as an undergraduate and in that time came to understand a little of the social and moral role that business has in society. I wanted to work in industry and operate in a way which took these into account. In practice as a junior member of staff this was very challenging, and I realised that the biggest impact I could have was by teaching and research business ethics.

2. What attracted you to work at Royal Holloway?

I was attracted to work at Royal Holloway because of the intellectual standing of the College and the School of Management in particular. I particularly value the strong social science perspective taken in the work of colleagues here.

3. What piece of advice would you give your younger self?

Take advice from others then decide for yourself what is right for you. Be bold.
