

"Career Development in a Global Pandemic – How to Thrive and Build Resilience in Challenging Times"

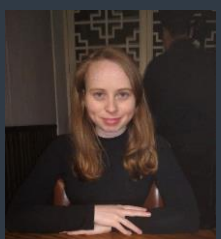

School of Life Sciences and the Environment

We are delighted to host 4 fantastic Alumni speakers, all graduates from the School of Life Sciences and the Environment, for a panel discussion and Q & A on how the current global pandemic is affecting different Industries and what this might mean for graduates entering the job market. We will explore how you can continue to make progress in your career during challenging times.

Harvinder Bhandal, Senior Territory Manager at Bioventus Global

Harvinder is a Senior Territory Manager at Bioventus Pharma, a global pharmaceuticals company. He is also an External Advisory Board Member for Life Sciences at Royal Holloway University.

Sarah Southwell, Liberian Embassy Intern and recent Geography graduate (2019)

Sarah graduated in 2019 with BA in Geography and moved to London. She was due to volunteer in Kenya this June but due to coronavirus this was cancelled. She then landed an internship at the Embassy of Liberia as part of her career goal to work in international relations

Jessica Cottam, Human Resources Business Partner at EDF Energy

Jessica is a HR Business Partner for EDF, following a BSc in Psychology from Royal Holloway in 2016. Since starting her career, Jessica has worked across various Industries, alongside completing her CIPD professional qualification. Jessica is keen to share her passion and knowledge of the HR profession to inspire new graduates to consider this exciting and fulfilling profession.

Les Hopper, Head of Innovation and Digital Product, Oxford University Press

Les' career has focused on strategy & innovation, digital & edtech and science education. Throughout his career, he has worked to develop solutions to problems in education and to find ways to improve educational outcomes. No matter what he does, Les tries to keep in mind the excitement that a learner can get when their experience of education really works for them.
